TENNYSON CENTER DINNER BREAKS FUNDRAISING RECORD TO HELP ABUSED & NEGLECTED CHILDREN

"The Promise", the theme for the 2014 Northern Colorado Dinner benefiting Tennyson Center for Children, proved to be especially appropriate as it helped to illustrate the promise we all must make to help children-in-need. And those in attendance at the event recently held at the Embassy Suites Hotel in Loveland stepped up to keep their promise I support of Tennyson Center's mission as the event raised a record of over $88,000.

Denver television anchor Gary Shapiro (KUSA-TV/9News) served as emcee for the evening, which began with a cocktail reception followed by an incredible dinner and compelling program featuring a keynote address from notable author Becky Johnson. Ms. Johnson has written over 40 books including "Your Brain on Joy."

It's important to note that Tennyson Center is celebrating its 110th anniversary of changing lives and giving hope to at-risk kids from all over Colorado, including the counties in northern Colorado. Tennyson got its start in Loveland in 1904, so it's fitting that the event, which has often been held in Ft. Collins, was moved back to its original hometown.

Tennyson Center for Children is the Rocky Mountain region's leading treatment center and school for abused, neglected and crisis-affected children. Through a variety of programs and services, Tennyson serves hundreds of children and family members every year. For more information visit www.childabuse.org
